COMEDY OF ERRORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR:—I should be sorry to attribute a wilfull negligence in the copying of my communication, "Our Great Regenerators." The errata are so conspicuous that the merest tyro in type-setting would see the absurd phrase given by such errors. Please correct the following: For "self-destruction" read "self-deception;" for "case" read "cash;" "Philip's pies" read "philippics." As regards our whilom editors the punctuation should read:

How skilfully they lay their plans,
How pure their doctges seem,
As if they had the cleanest hands
And their past had never been.

And last though not least, the "spirit" of the age is put "spout." I know of no "spout" except Uncle Aaronson's, of which the setter-up must have been thinking. Yours, etc.,

OUR MUSICAL COLUMN.

A Valuable Lecture to Choirs in General—D. S. C.'s Opinion.

Psalmody in the churches at present is in a deplorable condition, the choirs grinding the music out just as if they were machines and sometimes not even as well as a machine. Who is to blame for this state of affairs? In the very home of Psalmody, the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches—this is most apparent though the Episcopal and Catholic Churches are by no means faultless. Why is this? It is because of a lack of spiritual life. Conductors grumble because of the non-attendance of church members at choir practice and in order to fill up the choir and keep up their reputation they have to go outside the church; it may be to find singers. With a view of assisting conductors and those who do attend the practice, Demi Semi Quaver would like to give a few suggestions.

Church music should be a matter of interest to every church member as well as to the minister and conductor, and everyone who possesses a good voice should join the choir and make it a point to attend the practice regularly. Some make the excuse that they "can do but little." Well go and do that little and you will be rewarded. Others say they "can do nothing." Perhaps not by singing, but you can enlist others, you can appoint yourself a recruiting sergeant for the choir. Others say I don't like the leader. Never mind his personality. You are not singing to praise him, you are praising God.

To members of the choir, Demi Semi Quaver would like to say a few words with the hope that it will be taken to heart. Cheerfully and regularly attend all meetings of the choir. Do not remain out of it because there are some people in it whom you don't like. Perhaps there will be some people in Heaven whom you don't like, and if you follow those ideas to their logical conclusion you would stay out of Heaven. Do not convert the house of God into a place set apart for gossip. Every Sabbath day in any of our city churches, this whispering and chattering goes on, and especially so when the minister is praying. Do not pass notes round the choir during the service. Conductors are especially to blame for this. To them I would say: Let your instructions be given in full before taking your places, and so avoid this unseemly thing. Sing with your heart and understanding and when you grow old you will remember with great pleasure the time spent in attending practices and services in connection with the church choir.

Ministers do not take sufficient interest in the choir. They send their list of hymns for the Sunday services to the conductor on the practice night and there's an end of it. Let our minister come in to practice occasionally, thereby showing his interest and diffusing enthusiasm among the members of the choir. The choir with which the writer was connected with long years ago had for its president the minister himself, and he was always the most regular attendant.

Demi Semi Quaver has a work for the conductor. To be successful you must not only possess musical ability but you must be gifted with tact, and no matter how much you excel as a musician if you have not an abundance of good common sense and tact you will not be very successful. Do not allow your weekly practice to be uninteresting when you find the interest waning. Change the music, and at this point I would say do not bring out your choir week after week to practice hymns and anthems only. Give them a little more to keep them interested and there is nothing like having lots to do in order to keep it up.

While keeping in remembrance that "familiarity breeds contempt," you should also remember to speak to your choir with politeness and respect. What a privilege it is to be the leader of praise in the house of the Lord. It is said the great secret of good singing is when the soul of the singer is at rest with Him whom the singer praises. Demi Semi Quaver is informed that when Mr. Moody requested, one evening this week, all Christians to stand up, about seven-eighths of the large union choir rose to their feet. Is it any wonder that the singing is so good? Hearts and voices in unison bringing forth strains of sweet music to their Maker.

The Choral Society met last Wednesday evening for their first rehearsal and between thirty and forty were in attendance. Three or four choruses from "Judas Maccabeaus" were rehearsed, which gave great satisfaction to Prof. Sharp and the committee.

The revival services at the rink have been interfering considerably with many meetings, but they will probably cease in a few days and the rehearsals of Choral society and other organizations will go on more regularly. Demi Semi Quaver would like to see a large turn out at the next rehearsal of the society on Wednesday evening.

There are some splendid voices in the Union Choir which should be in the Choral Society. The committee should be at work urging everyone to join—Demi Semi Quaver would suggest that Prof. Sharpe, Mr. Brown or members of the committee should speak to the Union Choir on the matter of becoming members of the society and no doubt a great many will be easily persuaded to join.

Talking of the Union Choir, Demi Semi Quaver would like to know who the lady is who persists in coming in a note ahead of all the others, notwithstanding the superhumar exertions of Prof. Sharpe at the organ and Mr. Brown with the baton. The lady has a good voice but that does not make up for bad time. Some of the hymns were completely spoiled by inattention to this.

If the choir instead of staring at those going into the enquiry room would pay attention to the music and the beat of the conductor much better singing would be had. With familiar hymns this fault is most apparent and the result is neither sense, time, nor music.

Vancouver, Oct. 19—The citizens are voting on the market by-law to-day.

The steamship Duke of Westminster arrived from San Francisco at 8 o'clock this morning.

A union meeting of the churches which, was largely attended, took place in the Wilson Hall last evening. Rev. J. W. Pedley conducted the meeting and the choir was led by Mr. David Evans. A choir practice took place after the meeting, and this evening all singers are invited to meet at the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. E. B. Heroon cut his foot badly while out surveying the other day and will likely be laid up for several weeks.

Mr. H. Cole, of the Greyhound Hotel, who takes a deep interest in athletic sports, has with his accustomed generosity, donated a challenge cup to be competed for by the football clubs of the province. The club winning the most matches during the season will be awarded the prize, which will become the property of the club which wins it for three successive years. A meeting of the football committee takes place in Mr. C. Nelson's drug store this evening for the purpose of electing a vice-captain, and to arrange for a series of matches with the other clubs of the province.

The citizens appear to be making active preparation for the due observance of Arbor Day, and if the weather only proves favorable there is not a doubt but that considerable work will be done.

It is proposed to have a football match on that day between the football club and the lacrosse team.

This morning German Faris, a sailor on the bark Genievere, at Moodyville, was charged before Magistrate McLean with drawing a knife on a fellow sailor on the 15th inst., and fined $20 and costs.

Capt. Going, of the steamer Richmond, was charged with destruction of piles at False Creek. Remanded.

A. Hopkins was charged with larceny of blankets from one Wilson, and sentenced to three months in the penitentiary.

To-day's train arrived on time. It had on board a large number of passengers. The Yosemite did not arrive from Victoria till 11:30 a. m. to-day.

MOODY'S MEETINGS.

An Important Talk on "Compassion"—Unabated Interest.

The roller rink was filled last evening with the usual eager crowd of attentive listeners anxious to hear Mr. Moody. After the usual preliminary services, which were earnest and full of life, the singing especially being well rendered, Mr. Moody read from the 10th chapter of St. Luke. After a short prayer and the singing of the hymn "He's the Lily of the Valley," Mr. Moody announced his subject for the evening in the simple word "Compassion." Search the bible through and there was no word which gave us the key to Christ's heart like "Compassion." The name of Abraham Lincoln will move an American audience, and why? Because they loved him for his big heart, which was full of sympathy for every one. Christ's heart was easily touched. He read the stories of woe and misery in the faces of the vast multitude, and His heart opened towards them. If all the misery of those present was written what a book it would make. Those in need of help have nothing to do but to go to Christ; He will receive them. He feels for them. He suffered and died to help poor lost sinners. The Leper went to Him straight and cried, "Lord, if Thou will Thou canst make me clean." We are all born sinners, and the leprosy of sin is far worse than the leprosy of the flesh. He wants to take our burthens, to cleanse our souls from all sin. All we have to do is to ask Him. He loves sinners. The greater the sinner the greater the love of Christ. He wants to show mercy to everyone. The sweetest name we learn to lisp is the name of mother! We know our mother's heart to be full of sympathy; the name is dear to us because we like to tell all our troubles to our "mother." Let the shout go up from the meeting that all want to become His and He will come to you. He said, "come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, I will give you rest."

The address was delivered with all the feeling for which the speaker is noted, making deep impressions on the hearers. A large number sought the consolation of the enquiry room. The singing of a hymn and a short address and prayer by Rev. Mr. McLeod, who was followed by others of the congregation, some of them at great length to the evident discomfiture of many in the audience. There will be no service this afternoon or evening. Mr. Studd and Mr. Winslow will conduct a meeting "for young men and old men," in the First Presbyterian Church this evening at 8 o'clock. All are invited to attend.

To-morrow's services by Mr. Moody will be: At 9:30 a. m., at Pandora Street Methodist Church, in the rink at 4 p. m. and at 8 o'clock in the evening. The crowd to-morrow evening will be very large, and those desirous of securing seats or even admission should go early.

Crofter Immigration.

Mr. Allen Begg, Crofter commissioner, leaves for the east this evening en route for the old country to complete the details of the proposed Crofter immigration scheme. Mr. Begg informed a TIMES reporter that he is perfectly ignorant of the rumors published concerning London Crofters for British Columbia which are altogether incorrect, as Crofter cookneys are unknown except to the geographer-in-chief to the establishment on Government street. Neither has there been any arrangements made for the employment of Crofters for the salmon fisheries, although some of the northern cannery companies have made propositions to bring out this desirable class of labor at their own expense. The Commission is satisfied, however, that when arrangements are completed to enable those Scottish fishermen to settle on the shores of British Columbia, they will be found capable of competing in the labor market of the fisheries or other industries. The Crofters come of a race that are able to hold their own, either in the field of labor, business or literature and even newspapers. From what can be learned the Provincial Government have agreed to lend their aid to carry out the scheme of Mr. Begg. The first detachment will arrive here early next spring.

CLEVELAND'S CHANCES.

People on this side of the boundary line engrossed in their daily business, and their own local affairs, little realize the great political battle which is raging among their neighbors in the United States. To say the battle is "raging" perhaps scarcely expresses the condition of things over there, for with all the strong feeling and bitterness which naturally enters an intense political contest, it must be admitted that the present campaign is conducted with a moderation and a respect for law and order that speaks well for the American people. There are in the United States, as there are everywhere, hot-headed men who do rash and indiscreet things, which bring discredit upon the name of the nation, but when it is remembered that a great mass of humanity, of over sixty milllions of souls, has been running for the past six months at a high political tension, their conduct has been such that we must admit their high state of civilization and their form of government must still further command respect and admiration.

A general survey of the field indicates that the final contest, two weeks from next Tuesday, is going to be a close one, with the chances probably in favor of CLEVELAND. Four years ago he carried the country against the party entrenched in power, and it is difficult to see how he will be beaten now when things are reversed. During his term of office business has been good, and the great republic has progressed. His strength, force of will, and apparent honesty at least have given a new character to his party. It is not a reproach now to be a Democrat, like it used to be. In addition to all this, President CLEVELAND and his party have not scrupled to use the machinery of the Government in the interests of their party. On the other hand the Republicans have been at a disadvantage in dealing with the Chinese, fisheries, and other questions. To ensure the election of CLEVELAND, it will be only necessary for the Democrats to carry those states which supported him in 1884. They could even afford to lose Indiana or any other state or states with eighteen electoral votes and still succeed. But in order to elect HARRISON the Republicans must retain all the states that voted for BLAINE four years ago and win nineteen electoral votes besides. Can they do it? We believe not. BLAINE'S unfortunate defence of trusts, fostered by high customs tariffs, has handicapped the Republicans, and the plumed knight, the pride of the party, plays now no important part in the contest. When CLEVELAND issued his "retaliation message" the Republicans "went him one better" by proposing the annexation of Canada, but it is doubtful if any votes will be influenced by these bits of by-play. The passage and enforcement of the Chinese exclusion bill will greatly strengthen the Democrats on the Pacific Coast and possibly carry California. Surveying the whole field carefully, one can only conclude that unless there are influences at work that we know not of and which cannot be discounted CLEVELAND will enjoy another term.

WHAT HAVE WE GOT?

In reply to an article appearing in THE TIMES, the Toronto Monetary Times asks "what has the Victoria M. P.'s, or THE TIMES been asking of the government that they have not got? Well, Victoria has been asking for barracks for "C" Battery, but she hasn't got them yet. She has been asking for improvements to the harbor, but the request has not been granted. The port of Victoria at the same time collects two-thirds of the customs duties of the province, $70,000 being paid over every month into the Dominion coffers. But not only does Sir JOHN'S government propose to give us nothing but to take away even that which we have. C Battery, will remain for the present, but a commencement is to be made with the removal of the Chinese interpreter's office on the plea that there is no business for it. This is done in the face of the facts that the transactions in that department have been larger during the past two months than at any time since it was established. Sir JOHN cannot say of the interpreter as he did in the famous LETELLIER case, when lost for an excuse to justify an arbitrary proceeding, "his usefulness has ceased." We are quite willing to give the Dominion Government credit when they deserve it but when we see the cabinet ministers with their hands at the throat of Victoria and conniving to increase the value of their own property at our expense we will oppose them with all our power.

A GRIT WANTED.

An Ottawa despatch received a day or two ago stated that a new steamer, costing $140,000, which is to perform the winter service between Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia for the Dominion Government, had been launched on the Clyde. From other sources it is learned that the Federal Government is spending a large amount of money in the Island province on harbors and piers. Yet the "garden of the sea" sent a solid contingent to Ottawa at the last general election to oppose SIR JOHN'S government. In Prince Edward Island, as in Manitoba, the Liberal members appear to do better for their constituents than some of our always "SIR JOHN men" do for British Columbia. What is more they are better respected, simply because they have enough force and independence to resent any neglect or ill treatment of those whom they represent. By all means let us have one Grit member to look after our interests.

GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

Wherever the newly-acquired territory or interests of Germany come in contact with that of our Empire, they show a determination to push their influences to an extreme. We have them in East Africa, on the plea of sending relief to EMIN PASHA, actually proposing to establish a line of posts, mayhap forts, in the rear of the littoral territory ceded to the East African Company, thus endeavoring to shut off, as it were, British influence from the interior, which, according to a tacit understanding between both governments, was to be left open to be absorbed gradually in the possessions of the company. In this they, however, will be balked. The East African Company are already on the ground, and are sufficiently alive to their own interests to checkmate the great Chancellor in his African undertakings. We have them also in New Guinea, Borneo and Samoa. Late despatches inform us of the intention to prepare a naval and military expedition for the East African coast. Their late high-handed proceedings in the affairs of Samoa, a country under the protection England and the United States, coupled with the arrogant demands against the liberty of the press, plainly indicates that they are "blue moulding for want of a batin." Flushed with victory after the war of 1870-71, the so-called father of the Empire, Prince Bismarck, almost demanded the surrender of that barren sand bank at the mouth of the Elb, Heligoland. The garrison consists of a corporal's guard of marines. The British people told him to take it if—but he didn't. The proposal of the fallen Emperor for the partition of Belgium, and a common war against England was still fresh in their minds. The relations between St. James' and Berlin are becoming more and more estranged every day and the practical advice lately given by the Pall Mall Gazette on the liberty of the press may help to widen the breach. The Chancellor has sustained a serious loss to his reputation, and the young Emperor is evidently itching to fill the place of the Red Prince. Germany has a large army, but lacks the ships to transport that army to any of her outlying homesteads, in some of which she can never hope to fulfill the conditions required of her. Whatever harm she can do to England must be confined to the continent; beyond that she is powerless.

SERVING TWO MASTERS.

On the 4th of the present month the morning organ of the government published the following item:

"Mr. Simeon Duck, M. P. P., was elected to the vacant city treasurship by the unanimous vote of the council. This will probably cause a vacancy in the legislature for Victoria City district."

The organ was, therefore, at that time, two weeks ago, of opinion that the acceptance of the treasureship would cause a vacancy. This morning the same paper says:

"We should like to know in what sense is Mr. Duck's position as City Treasurer dual. What connection is there between the treasury of the city and the local legislature? What can there be in either position to prevent him doing his duty efficiently and faithfully in the other?"

Are these two statements quite consistent, or do they not show a change in the views of the writer as to the propriety of Mr. DUCK holding the two positions? Mr. DUCK has a habit of holding on to place, power, and pelf in opposition to the well understood wishes of the people, and was only compelled to loosen his hold on the money-bags of the treasury after being defeated at the polls, by the force of public opinion. Of course he will retain both positions if he is permitted; but we do not believe that it is the desire of a majority of the council that he should remain in the employ of the corporation if he elects to retain his seat in the House. Mr. DUCK is not such a remarkably clever man—his abilities as a statesman, or in the clerical work of book-keeping, are not so rare or so great—that it is positively necessary in the public interest that he should try to serve two masters or make a vain effort to keep two widely separated chairs warm during the long winter. The argument of the organ of the Government faction, that whereas it is proper for a mayor to hold a seat in the Legislature, it cannot be wrong for a corporation collector, who is paid $2000 to attend to the business of the city, to do the same thing, is the veriest kind of nonsense. There is no analogy between the positions occupied by the Mayor and the collector, and so long as the Mayor is able to attend to the duties of both positions there can be no objection. But it will be remembered that there was considerable opposition to Mayor FELL'S candidacy for the House of Commons, on the ground that he could not give his attention to city affairs if he went to Ottawa six months in the year, and that cry was one of the principal reasons for his defeat. Mr. DUCK is now a paid servant of the city, and is not his own master. The city wants his whole time, and if he is wise he will not do anything to add to the difficulties of his own position. A systematic neglect of the office in consequence of his absence therefrom in the interest of a faction, added to careless and indifferent book-keeping, the result of inexperience, may land him in inextricable confusion; and the next stage of the corporation ledgers would then stand an excellent chance of being as much muddled as at present. Do the citizens want that?

"Age Cannot Wither Her." remarked an old gentleman, as he gazed fondly upon the comely little woman by his side; "but frankly," he continued, "at one time I was afraid cosmetics would." The silly little woman, in order to appear youthful, plastered her face with different varieties of whitewash, yclept "balms," "creams," "lotions," etc. "Yes," interrupted the little woman, "I did, until my skin became like parchment, and so pimply and coarse." "Well," said the listner, "what do you use now?" "Use," was the reply, "nothing but common sense, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Common sense told me if my blood was pure, liver regulated, appetite good, that the outward woman would take on the hue of health. The 'Discovery' did all those things, and actually rejuvenated me."

The Right Time.

Probably there is no period in life more important for the mental and moral training of youths than that between eight and seventeen years of age. If the spring-time of life is well employed, good results may be expected in after years. OUR OCEAN FERRIES.

Some Information Bearing Upon the Practicability of Crossing the Straits.

The Longest Ferry in the World, 36 Miles—Description of the Vessel, Etc.

The following correspondence and newspaper extract have an especial interest for Victorians at the present time when two schemes are before them for surmounting the insular difficulties of their situation, viz, the Victoria Saanich & Westminster Railway, and Beecher Bay and Crescent Bay ferry in connection with the Southern Pacific and Island Railways.

Location Survey Camp, }
Samish River, 11th Oct, 1888. }

SIR,—During the past three years I have been making enquiries in various directions and obtaining opinions of professional men as to the practicability of transporting passengers and trains of cars over long distances of exposed seaway. The accompanying letter from the superintendent of the longest railway ferry in existence, and extract from London Engineering should finally set the matter at rest as to the entire feasability of a safe working ferry running on schedule time across either Straits of Fuca or Gulf of Georgia. Yours truly,

C. E. PERRY,
Engineer in charge West Coast Branch.

"Superintendent's Office, New York, }
Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad Co., }
Cape Charles, Sept. 28th, 1888. }

C. E. PERRY, Engineer in charge, Whatcom, W. T.

DEAR SIR,—I have just received your letter making enquiry about our transfer steamer Cape Charles to Norfolk. Our route is about 23 miles of water, 24 miles of which is through the open Chesapeake Bay, and our water gets as rough very often as the English Channel. We have used the steamer in the main for carrying Pullman cars across the Bay and she will hold four cars. I do not remember exactly what she cost, but think $175,000. I will be glad to furnish you any further information I may have in reference to this boat. Yours truly,

H. W. DUNN,
Superintendent.

THE FERRY STEAMER "CAPE CHARLES"

We give this week a two-page engraving containing general views and details of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company's transfer, or ferry steamer Cape Charles, constructed by the Harlan & Hollingsworth Company, of Wilmington, Del., under the superintendence of Mr. W. B. Reaney, of Philadelphia, the engineer of the company. The vessel has been built for service in a 40-mile route across the mouth of Chesapeake bay, and is now regularly running four trips (160 miles) per day. This is, we believe, by far the longest "railway ferry" that has yet been undertaken.

The general design of the vessel is that of a paddle steamer, with guards all around the hull, and is adopted for the transfer of four railway cars, and the accommodation of their passengers. The builders' aim has been to give an outside appearance similar to the typical American side-wheel steamer, and for this reason mainly, the plan was adopted of using only the forward end of the boat for the approach to the slips, to receive the cars, and of keeping the after end for saloon purposes for the passengers. The general dimensions of the hull are as follows:

	Feet	In
Length on 6 feet water line	252	0
Length over all	259	6
Beam, moulded	36	0
Beam, over all	63	6
Depth from base line (top of keel) to top of roof beams at lowest place	14	0

The hull and deck framing are of iron. The steamer is provided with steam steering gear, steam windlass, and an electric light plant, including an electric ocean projector of 4,000-candle power.

The motive power consists of one surface condensing beam engine, with cylinder of 54 inch. in diameter and 11 ft. stroke of piston. The engine is designed for a working pressure of 60 lbs., and a speed of 35 revolutions per minute, and is provided with "Stevens' cut-off," set to carry steam for about one-half stroke. The engine is mounted on an engine frame made of plate and angle iron, and rigidly attached to the engine keelsons of the hull.

The surface condenser is placed directly under the steam cylinder, and consists of a cast-iron shell inclosing 2,444½ in. brass tube. Each tube is fitted into the brass tube plates, and packed with lace packing and a screw follower. The refrigerating surface is 3,358 square feet, or about 60 per cent of the heating surface in the boilers. Salt water is circulated through the tubes by a 12 inch centrifugal pump, the water entering at the upper nests of tubes and leaving through the bottom nests.

The paddle wheels are of the feathering type and are 24 feet, 6 inches in diameter, with floats 9 feet, 6 inches long and 4½ feet, 6 inches dip. Each wheel has twelve floats, 40 inch deep by 4½ inches thick. The wheels are carried on shafts of wrought iron 14½ inches in diameter, and rest at the outboard ends on cast-iron gunwale pedestals and benches attached to the sides of the hull.

The vessel is provided with two boilers of the return-tubular pattern, and they are located in a fore-and-aft line with the stokehold between them. Each boiler is 11 ft. 3 in. diameter of shell, 13 ft. across furnace front, and 18 ft. long, and has 3 furnaces. The combined grate surface of the two boilers is 172 square feet, and the heating surface is 4,804 square feet. Each boiler has an independent steam drum and chimney 7 ft. 3 in. in diameter and 13 ft. high. The boilers are proportioned for a working pressure of 60 lbs. of steam.

A trial trip of the boat and machinery was made in the Delaware river, abreast the city of Wilmington, on March 17th, 1885, in order to prove the builders' guaranteed of 17 miles per hour in slack water. The following are the data and results of this trip:

Draught of water with 56 tons of coal, and ballast to equal weight of cars ..... 7 ft. even keel
Displacement above draught 794 gross tons.
Average steam pressure..... 55 lb. to 58 lb.
Average vacuum pressure..... 27 in.
Average revolutions per min. 35

Speed (over measured distance) as follows:—
Rate per hour, with tide.....20.81 miles.
Rate per hour, against tide...16.14 miles.
Mean rate per hour, or in slack water..... 18.48 statute miles.

The above trial was considered highly successful, and the railroad officials were much pleased; they accepted the boat on this trial, and at once placed her on the route where she has been running constantly and successfully, making schedule time. The builders, knowing that the success of the new railroad depended mainly on the ability of the boat to make a regular train schedule speed, have endeavored to make the Cape Charles fully equal to the unusual requirements.—London Engineering, January 15, 1886.

CHAPTER XXI.

"I AM YOUR BROTHER."

Once more the tramp, and for the last time.

It was in the month of December. Robert Edgerly had lingered on in America since June. Late in the autumn Brownie joined him. There was to be a reunion of all the scattered Carstones in the stone house at Christmas.

There had been change upon change, for all but Shirley. As if to annihilate all the old from the face of nature itself, a new railway had been built through Linwood. It cut through the woods where the villagers had been wont to picnic, on Fourth of July and on other occasions, time out of mind. The fine old wood had been the last bit of native forest of any size left in that region. Now its picturesqueness was destroyed by the new railway.

Along the iron track of the new road walked, of a crisp, frosty morning, our old friend, Rip the Tramp. On second thoughts—yes he is our friend. He is indeed very far gone in trampism now, and disreputable as to other party's record before election, but for for all that we won't disown him.

No, by the holy dollar. We have been among grand people of late, but we will not therefore deny our old acquaintances. You would not have known Rip. Exposure, over drinking, under and over feeding and wickedness had written their story all over him. He slunk along, regular tramp gait. His trousers' legs were slitted to the knee. His eyes were red and watery. The one sign that distinguishes infallibly a tramp from every other human being is his shoes. They are invariably wretched, down at the heel, split out and utterly hopeless. As long as a human being has a vestige of respectability left he proclaims it by a pair of decent shoes.

Rip's foot covering, if you could call it that, scarcely clung to his disreputable feet. He coughed hoarsely from time to time. His arms and knees trembled. He was bent like a man of 80. A doctor would have prophesied that his body would be found on the dissecting table of a medical college in three months' time.

Rip talked aloud to himself, as most uncultured persons do. He looked about him as he slouched along, now at the familiar wood, now at the unfamiliar iron track of the new railway. He suddenly found himself almost at the very spot where he knocked poor Sam over. He was uncomfortable as he recollected it.

"Ach!" he exclaimed, "I never meant to kill him, the fool! Why didn't he keep off? I hain't been here since. 'Twas full eight years ago. But if them Linwooders 'd ketch me even now 'twould be all up with me, I reckon. What'll I do? If I come to Linwood, I'll be arrested. If I don't come to Linwood, I don't get my rights. As a feller might say, I'm between the devil and deep sea."

He stopped to cough, and went on with his meditations aloud:

"I didn't know these woods had been cut away so or I wouldn't a come yer in daylight. If I can git where I'm agoin' before anybody senses me, I'm all right. If I can't—But I don't know what I wouldn't rather do than to face a Linwooder right here. I'd rather take a bath, by golly!"

He saw something upon the track and stopped to pick it up. He wavered as he stooped and staggered to recover himself.

"Drunk agin, by Peter!" he remarked, coolly.

But Rip was not drunk.

The article he picked up was a handkerchief. It was a lady's, small, snowy and very fine. He held it up in his fingers and made a face at it.

"Be golly dinged, if I ever see such a wipe as that! Hello, there's letters on it. Them ain't plain English. My son, polish up your fancy larnin'. There's a 'B' and there's an 'E'—'B, E.' What's that stand for? There she comes, by golly! steppin' along this yer blessed track—Brownie Edgerly. She walks as if the ground wasn't good enough to hold her. Always walked that way. Hay, Mistis—Good God, there's the cars!"

The train was behind Brownie, right upon her, and she did not know it. There was a roar as if the earth was rent in twain, and then darkness. The evil Rip had been working all his neglected life may be forgiven him for the good he did then.

Reader, think of him kindly, after all.

One of the sudden impulsions toward the better that come from some unknown realm to the worst of men, came to Rip, and filled all his soul in that flash of time. He darted forward like lightning. He nerved himself with all the strength that yet lay in his once powerful right arm, and shoved Brownie off the track to one side.

At the same instant the engine struck him in the breast and knocked him off the other side. Then the monster sped on with its rear like the wings of ten thousand angels of darkness.

Rip lay quite still. He did not know it when careful hands lifted him kindly and carried him to the stone house. He did not know it still when a gentle, awestricken voice, Shirley's own voice, said:

"Lay the poor fellow right in there—put him on my bed."

He came to himself, and saw himself in a beautiful room, upon a snowy bed. Faces were around there that he knew, and they looked anxious and kindly, every one. There were Shirley and Robert Edgerly, Harry Carstone, and the ancient doctor, now very old. He glanced from one to the other. They looked friendly.

"Don't—don't give me away," he said feebly.

"Never, Rip, never!" said Shirley. "Don't be afraid."

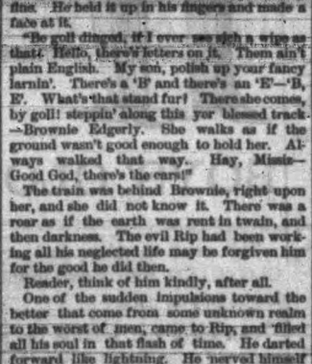
A film dimmed his eyes. Blood trickled from his nostrils. He had been crushed internally. Shirley wiped the blood away with a moist sponge. He shuddered.

"Don't!" he gasped. "Don't put cold water on me. Water'll kill me."

He looked from one to the other again, and recognized Robert Edgerly. A light came into his face, and a half smile. He motioned faintly toward the Englishman.

"Brother," said he, "will you shake hands with me?"

Robert extended his fingers to humor him. The tramp's hand, soiled and clawlike, stained with God knows what blood, clasped the gentleman's hand, white and shapely, and held it.



ON THE RAILWAY TRACK.

It pleased Rip. Presently he began wandering with his talk.

"Brother," said he, "I saved your wife's life, didn't I? Chalk that down to me."

He stopped a little, then wandered on.

"If I'd had my rights I'd a been a gentleman, too. Then Brownie'd a been my wife instead of yours. Understand? My wife. It made me mad. But I don't grudge her to you any more, brother. Chalk that down, too."

He coughed. He was growing weaker fast. When he spoke next his voice came in gasps:

"Don't be too hard on me, brother. Mind, I never had no chance. I'd a been a gentleman, too, but luck was agin me. I tried it once, for I had good blood in me, your blood. I'd have made it if the Carstones had took me up, but they didn't. Luck—was always—agin me."

He rested a little once more, keeping fast hold of the Englishman's hand. He kept his failing eyes upon Edgerly's face, as if he could never get enough of seeing him. Once more he talked:

"I reckon I've been as bad as they make 'em. I'm a thief. I've killed a man or two in my time. But I'm no slouch. I never went back on a pard. And I never worked in politics. Chalk that down to me. 'Twas because I—had good blood—in me, brother."

He ceased. It was plain his race was run.

Shirley had been watching him intently. She listened to his wandering talk, first with a puzzled expression, then more and more eagerly catching every word.

A new look came over his face, the look of the dying. It was one of those marvelous likenesses that sometimes settle in the human face at the last, when the soul is leaving the body. At this supreme moment traces of blood and far off kinship that were never seen before appear and stamp their mark on the face that death is taking for its own.

As Shirley saw this mysterious, ineffable look, an expression of horror came into her own countenance. All at once she started as if she had been struck. She grasped Edgerly's arm and shook him.

"Robert, Robert, quick! I think—I believe oh, I don't know what! For heaven's sake, call him, rouse him, ask him who he is!"

Edgerly laid his hand upon the tramp's shoulder. He roused him gently. He bent his ear down to the man's lips. It was almost a dead man's lips now. He said:

"In God's name, who are you?"

A smile of immortal beauty stole into the tramp's face. It glorified it beyond anything earthly. It was the farewell of a parting soul. He fumbled feebly at his breast with one hand, as if searching for something. The other hand clasped its stiffening fingers yet closer around Edgerly's. And with the immortal smile upon his face, with Robert's hand fast clasped in his, he whispered:

"I am your brother!"

The fortune of Russell Sage is estimated at $60,000,000. The old financier is over seventy years of age, married, and childless. He is in splendid health and does not look his years. Although he has no children, Mr Sage has a large number of nieces and nephews, to whom he is generous with his money, though he spends very little on himself. It is said that $10,000 a year will easily cover his living expenses. Well, two old people can live very comfortably on $10,000 a year. Why should they spend more if they don't want to?

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the throat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of tubercle germs into the system and when these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the head, causing catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to proceed will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your throat, lungs or nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of George Petherick and Miss Emma Frye, daughter of George Frye, Surveyor of Customs, took place at the Reformed Episcopal Church last evening. The interesting ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Bishop Cridge, assisted by Rev. Dr. Reid. The bridesmaids were Miss Coleman and Miss Bone. Mr. George Tite was best man. The happy couple left this afternoon on the steamer Mexico for San Jose, California, accompanied by the congratulations of their many friends in which THE TIMES joins.

For Chief of Police.

Deputy Sheriff John Langley is a candidate for the position of Chief of Police. He will have the support of many influential citizens and has the advantage of a training in the office of sheriff that would be of great advantage to him. There will no doubt be a great many applications.

Monopolists' Castle.

The Toronto Mail, Oct. 12, says: Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the great Pennsylvania iron king, who recently reduced the wages of his "protected" workingmen, although he himself makes $1,500,000 a year, has bought an old castle in Scotland in which somebody else's ancestors lived, and is looking for a family crest and motto. In a recent article on the struggle for existance Professor Huxley seems to have anticipated Mr. Carnegie's case. He says a fine old Scottish family, now happily extinct, bore the blazon, "Thou shalt starve ere I want."

Robber Arrested.

John Nelson alias John Johnson, was arrested this morning by Provincial Officer C. J. Miller, on a charge of housebreaking. During the fair at Saanich Mr. Dyer's residence on the Saanich road was entered and a quantity of jewelry and other articles were stolen. The case was reported to the Provincial police, and officer Miller located his man this morning and secured some of the booty. Johnson is an old offender and was recently discharged from the Provincial gaol after serving a term for stealing a gun from Mr. John Parker's residence at Craigflower. He will be tried on Monday next in the Provincial court.

Debate.

Young Men's Institute No. 85 held their first debate last night in Philharmonic Hall. The subject chosen was the exclusion of Chinese from the Dominion. Sergt. Mellon was elected chairman and filled the position with much tact and impartiality. Rev. J. A. Van Nevel and Alex McDonald, leaders of the debate, handled the subject in a manner which showed their thorough knowledge of the question. The members on each side brought forward arguments for and against the heathen, and the anti-Chinese party were greatly astonished when the chairman announced that the party favoring Chinese had brought forward the most convincing arguments. The next debate will take place on Friday, Nov. 2nd. The subject will be the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Killed at Comox.

The following are the particulars of the accident at the Union Mines, on the 13th inst., by which Ralph O'Leary, aged 23 years, and a native of Lampton county, Ont., lost his life. Deceased was working on the Howe Truss, over the Trent river, Blackett's contract. He was engaged with two other carpenters, in removing some false work off the "span" preparatory to putting on the floor beams. While in the act of putting on a piece of timber on the "dolly" (a roller for moving timbers) he was noticed to fall by one of his fellow employees, and catch a brace a few feet below with his right arm. His stoppage was but momentary, as he let go his hold and sped to a frightful death some eighty-five feet below. He never spoke when picked up, and lived about twenty minutes.

OUR TOWN MAJOR.

To The Ladies—The Moody Meetings and Other Matters.

Ladies, the Major salutes you with his usual weekly greeting. The old chap has seen a great deal of his fair friends during the past eventful week at the rink, lending their powerful aid and influence to help along the good work of Mr. D. L. Moody. We all acknowledge it was not before it was needed. The good man has told you in his simple, pathetic way of the influence of your sex on us miserable men; of the mother, of the sweetheart and of the sister and friend. He told you last night of the Savior going to sinners and the fallen Mary Magdalen, the outcast and despised. We have many Mary's here; do any ever go to them as the Saviour did? Mr. Moody also told you that your coldness to the stranger and your indifference was the main cause of the unchristian state of your society. Does he know of your little cliques and coteries, your exclusive circles and rings. If not, then he ought to, before he leaves. Keep the good man in Victoria as long as you can; it will only require a little persuasion to do it. He likes the sweet voices that lend such attraction to the services. So does the Major. Endeavor to prolong a stay that has been so beneficial to your beautiful city.

Can't the ladies stay the zeal of those brothers that bellow forth a tirade against themselves, the world and their Creator. One of them, with a superabundance of good intentions, praised the Lord for the beauties of nature and all good things, but condemned the vile body that the Lord made in His own image. These long-winded complaints of vain repetitions serve no good end. They may be well suited to the closet, but don't answer for public meeting.

THE TIMES man has been giving us a lecture on the plurality of wives as advocated in England by a crank or two. How would it be here were a fellow to have more than one? There's the hats, the dresses, the face powder, the hair, the —, oh, a thousand things. What would a poor fellow do? The cat has nine lives, and he's no duffer; a fellow with two wives would be great sight tougher.

The Major has good news for the ladies. Professor Ayrtoun, of London, has discovered a means whereby he can make a ton of coal develope eight times the energy obtained at present. We must persuade the professor to come over and show us the "how." It would pay to send a deputation and invite him here. Then there would be no need of you singing: "In the fleeting evenings, after pap's asleep, my darling Frank and I, would our vigils keep. 'Tis in those hours which creep along so dull, we sit shivering because the scuttle wasn't full. 'Tis awful just to think, what in thunder can be done; the case can't be altered for coal is $10 a ton!"

Go one and all to hear Mr. Moody to-morrow evening. He's not jealous of the Major. But if you go to hear him about the true spirit don't go to room No. 8 in the hotel and have an interview with the other spirits. Mr. Moody charges nothing. The Major twigged his friend the "Ex-Councillor" going to have his $2 worth yesterday; he wanted to know about the election, the Major and the Grant criminal libel suit. He ought to be well supplied with "spirits," good, bad and indifferent. In the morning at the Clarence, in the afternoon at the Fardora street, and in the evening at the Moody tabernacle, of which he's the chief prop. Will he be senator for Esquimalt or will it be

THE TOWN MAJOR.

MRS. SAMPSON, MEDIUM.

Our Reporter Has an Interview But No Seance.

Wanting to be posted on a number of things, such as the civic elections, the pending libel suits, the and coal question, a man of THE TIMES called upon Mrs. Sampson, the great spiritual medium this forenoon. He was politely received at room No. 8, Clarence Hotel, and asked to be seated in the ante-room. The lady in attendance, whose nimble fingers were busy in the mysteries of fixing up and adding to the beauties of an adorable head-dress, chatted pleasantly for some time on spirits and spirit land. The medium opened the inner door and our reporter was asked to enter. He found a lady well advanced in years, and rather inclined en bonpoint. Her features were pleasing and intelligent. Being requested to take a seat, the following interview took place:

Medium—You're a newspaper man (score one for the medium). I want you to write me up a nice article, say one that'll do me good. I'll pay $10. Every one comes to see me, lords, doctors, lawyers, merchants, yes, and clergymen. They'd better say nothing about me. I could empty all the churches — doctors' offices, and lawyer's offices, yes and even newspapers; I could clean them out (pity she will not try to clean some of them) if they'd attempt to interfere with me. Oh! you may laugh. If you say a word about me but what's good, I'll get the other paper to contradict you. See here; I have lords, real live lords. They've invited me to go to London, Park Lane, no less—that's where they live.

Reporter—Are you sure that it's Park Lane; perhaps it's Petticoat Lane?

Medium—No, see here's the address. You can read it. Now what do you want to know?

Reporter—I want to know if you can call me up old Dean Swift or Julius Cæsar, the great Napoleon, the Duke of Wellington, Oliver Goldsmith, the author of "Junius," Tom Sayers or any of the respectable old-timers. Can you do it?

Medium—No. What have they to do with the business of the world. They'd know nothing about mines, lawsuits or that.

Reporter—Oh! they would, some of them. The old dean would be able to tell how they muzzled the press in his day, and Sir William Francis how the government shut up "Junius."

Medium—That's not in my line. I am going to London. Queen Victoria has her medium; I'm to be introduced into the best society. If you want a seance I'll give you one for nothing and pay you for writing an article. You must, however, confine yourself to mines, or a law suit, or your family.

Reporter—I'll send the editor up to you; his hands are full of them two first articles just now. Could you let me have a talk with Old King Cole? He's connected with mines.

Medium—Now, young man don't humbug. I can tell you all about yourself, and family matters, and ——

Reporter—Oh! I know all about them; so you needn't trouble. Let us have some public affairs.

Medium—them spirits you mention the public don't care about. What they want to know is about mines, lawsuits, sickness in their families, who's coming on the water, where you're friends are travelling and when they left home. I'm a business medium; read my testimonials, here.

Reporter—Yes I see. I go to Mr. Moody every evening, and he tells me all I want to know about myself and my spirits. I want something public.

Medium—So do I go to Mr. Moody. He's a great spirit in himself, young man. I go to church; I've nothing to do with "spiritual" belief. I tell you about mines; how deep they are down; what ore they've struck; how rich they are; lawsuits, and——

Reporter—I tell you I've no mines or law suits. I want something public. Now, let's have Tom Sayers. I want to know what he thinks of the Marquis of Queensbury rules, or Swift, what he thinks of the Victoria press. Something unique and interesting. Now go on.

Medium—What are you going to say in the paper about me?

Reporter—Here's what I have down about this interview.

Medium—That's not fair. I didn't think you would write that about me. It's ungentlemanly of you to take such an advantage of a lady. I lost $300,000 in a mine.

Reporter—Why didn't you consult the "spirits;" they'd have warned you.

Medium—Now don't you, humbug. The people of Victoria are creed-bound; they don't understand; they——

Reporter—They are anything but "creed-bound," as you say; there was a great deal of unbelief till Mr. Moody came. I hear you're going to Winnipeg. They have no mines there. You'll have to post yourself on frozen wheat and they are very great church-goers. Not at all like Victoria.

Medium—Oh! they'll have law suits; I know nothing about frozen wheat; they don't have any in California. Now, I can tell you about mines; how deep——

Reporter—I tell you again I've no mines or anything; nothing but this sheet of paper and pencil. Here's what I wrote about you; it's what you said—

Medium—I didn't think you'd go and publish that. Pay! I don't want any pay. You've taken up an hour of my time with your humbug. Senators and—

Reporter—The Senator from 'Squimalt, eh?

Medium—Yes, he was here. I told him about mines, law suits, elections, and—

Reporter—His electric railway?

The medium was silent and the reporter withdrew without having had a seance.

Fireman's Funeral.

The mortal remains of the late ex-Chief Engineer Phillips will be interred at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The fire department will turn out and will carry the remains of their ex-chief on the Deluge hose carriage. The Foresters and A. O. U. Unfounded Rumor.

Dr. J. D. Helmcken contradicts the rumor that has been circulated that Capt. McAllister died at St. Joseph's Hospital this morning. The Captain has been unwell for some days but is improving rapidly.

—The remains of the suicide, F. C. Wotten, were interred this morning by T. Storey. No answer was received from Nevada to the telegram sent yesterday morning.
